Anecdote of Mr. Webster.

Just before he died, and after his recovery was despaired of, one of his physicians approached his bedside, and asked how he found himself. "I feel like the jackdaw in the church steeple," was the strange reply. The physician withdrew sadly from the bedside to another part of the room, where some members of the family were standing together, and, shaking his head, confessed his apprehensions that the brain of the dying statesman was affected—that the stately oak was perishing at the top. He could see no method in the answer which the question had received. One of the ladies present, who knew Mr. Webster better, did not believe his mind was wandering, and, stepping quietly to his bedside, asked him what he meant by saying he felt "like the jackdaw in the church steeple?" "Why, Cowper; Cowper's delightful translation of one of Vincent Bourne's little poems, entitled 'The Jackdaw." I send you a copy of the verses, which some of your readers a copy of the verses, which some of your readers may have forgotten, or never read, that they may perceive the perfect fitness and point of the reply.

THE JACKDAW. The Jackbaw.

There is a bird who, by his coat,
And by the harshness of his note,
Might be supposed a crow;
A great frequenter of the church,
Where, bishop-like, he finds a perch,
And dormitory too.

Above the steeple shines a plate, That turns and turns to indicate
From what point blows the weather; Look up, your brains begin to swim, 'Tis in the clouds—that pleases him; He chooses it the rather.

Fond of the speculative height, Thither he wings his airy flight, And thence securely sees The bustle and the raree-show That occupy mankind below, Secure and at his ease.

You think, no doubt, he sits and muses On future broken bones and bruises, If he should chance to fall; No; not a single thought like that Employs his philosophic pate, Or troubles it at all.

He sees that this vast roundabout, Church, army, physic, law,
Its customs and its businesses
Are no concern at all of his,
And says—what says he?—Caw!

Thrice happy bird! I too have seen Much of the vanities of men,
And, sick of having seen 'em,
Would cheerfully these limbs resign
For such a pair of wings as thine, And such a head between 'em.

A WORK OF ART .- Mr. Rembrandt Lockwood A Work of Arr.—Mr. Rembrandt Lockwood, a young artist of this city, is now engaged upon a work of art, representing the last judgment, on which he has been employed during the last eight years, and which he expects to complete in a year. The föllowing description gives only the general features, for as the picture is extremely large and complicated, with a vast number of figures, a particular specification would require considerable length. Its principal aim is to represent the general religious idea of the last judgment without any ral religious idea of the last judgment without any dogmatical bias, and it portrays the different scenes incident to the great consummation of time, with all the resources of art—using sometimes representative portraits, and sometimes imaginative figures in developing them.

In the foreground is a group representing the different races of mankind. On the left is a large tomb or cave, and from it, issuing forth to judg ment, are all classes of the human race, the grea ment, are all classes of the human race, the great and small, the rich and poor, the learned and illite-rate, all passing forth in dreamy procession. In front of this group lies the figure of despotism, with his scourge, chain, and crown broken, signiwith his scourge, chain, and crown broken, signifying that his power is at an end. In contrast to this figure rises the noble form of Washington, as the type of liberty; and to show that in the sight of God the high and lowly are the same, angels are receiving this figure, and a slave, whose shackles are falling to the ground. Near this group is represented the reunion of a holy family, portraying the sweet conception of the meeting and recognition of friends in Heaven, where parting is no more. Circled together are the father. and recognition of friends in Heaven, where parting is no more. Circled together are the father, mother, and children; above them are rising up their good deeds in faith, hope, charity, long suffering, penitence, &c. Farther in the picture are groups representing philosophy, science, and the arts, the meeting of friends, the reconciliation of enemies, the return of the prodigal, &c. Above these is seen the crowning of saints, and their ascent to Heaven.

In the upper part of the picture the Saviour sits cent to Heaven.

In the upper part of the picture the Saviour sits enthroned in judgment, with uplifted hand and countenance full of lofty and sublime majesty, giving out the sentence, "Come ye blessed of my Father;" while circling around, like floods of glory, are seen the angels of the passion, bearing the robe of mockery, the scourging pillar, the crown of thorns, the cross, the nails, and spear. On either side are ranged the prophets and apostles in groups full of holy dignity, bearing the impressive characteristics of individuality. Below is represented St. Michael driving out the bad spirits of pride, lust, crime, &c., who are falling in headlong ruin, bears.

OFFICE OF CORRESPORTMENT. its of pride, lust, crime, &c., who are falling in headlong ruin before Satan, who sits enthroned on ambition, grasping a crown and sceptre, and surrounded by the vices of mankind—lying, drunkenness, envy, hate, malice; and covetous-ness contemplating his gold, the vase which con-tains it is broken, and his riches are passing away, showing how fleeting are the treasures

The tout ensemble shows, at the first glance, the subject and the general ideas, but it is only an analysis of the different groups, and then the crassembling of all the individuals into a general conception, that will convey a true judgment of the design and execution.

He announces that he is now about to publish the great work of his life, the idea of which has passed through all literary vicissitudes, and surmounted the temptations of print. More than a score of years ago he was going to publish it— had actually sold it to a famous Parisian publishor, but bought it back, and now startles this age of Ericsson steamships and electric telegraphs with the information that his "great thought" has grown since that time from the formidable bookshelf battalion of eight volumes to the snug libra-ry capacity of eighteen, all of which, in thrilling

GREAT THROUGH LINE TO THE WEST.

Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, from Baltimore to Wheeling, and connecting there with the large, new, and splendid Steamers of the Union Line on the Ohio, and the Stages to Zanesville, &c.

Union Line on the Ohio, and the Stages to Zanesville, &c.

THIS EXPEDITIOUS LINE being now thoroughly completed, by the late finishing of the Great Board Tree Tunnel, and the road being in excellent order, the carnest attention of travellers is confidently directed to its superior advantages and low fares. The scenery upon this road is of the most stupendous and attractive character. The Express Mail Train leaves Baltimore daily at 7p. m., and runs directly through to Wheeling (330 miles) in 18 or 19 hours, including all stoppages, arriving there at 2 or 3 p. m. next day; or, passengers leaving Baltimore at 8 a. m. may lay over for lodging in Cumberland, (179 miles,) and proceed thence to Wheeling in the morning.

To connect with these trains, the cars leave Washington at 6 a. m. and 5 p. m. daily, meeting the cars from Baltimore at the Washington Junction, (better known as the Relay House,) 9 miles from Baltimore.

At Wheeling the seven unrivalled steamers of the Union Line, which have just been completed for this route, form a daily connexion with the cars, and convey passengers down the Ohio to Cincinnati and Louisville, where the stages for Nashville, &c., or the St. Louis and New Orleans packets may be taken by those going further on.

Passengers for Columbus (or who prefer the land route to Cincinnatt) and other parts of Ohio and the West may also proceed direct from Wheeling in the Ohio Stage Company's excellent coaches over the best part of the National Road to Zanesville, &c., and thence by railroad.

Passengers for Wellsville and Cleveland by steamboat and railroad will also find this a most agreeable route, there being a regular and speedy connexion at Wheeling to and from those places.

(3-Baggage checked through from Washington to Wheeling, and no charge for transfer of pas-ville $12.

Tickets to be had of Mr. Parsons, Agent, at the Railroad Station, Washington, and of the other agents of the Company.

WM. PARKER, General Superintendent, May 11 WASHINGTON BRANCH RAILROAD.
